Israeli Paper Bluntly Opposes Policy Of Unrestricted Entry

Questioning of the Israeli Government's immigration policy, arising out of the severe economic difficulties facing the country at the moment, has begun to be heard in Israel. An increasing number of persons are saying that the time has come to restrict immigration, at least until some semblance of economic balance has been restored. The independent newspaper, Haaretz, gave public expression to the idea in an editorial last week.

It is a sign of the times that the editorial has been greeted calmly. Six months or a year ago it probably would have led to a bitter denunciation of the paper as unpatriotic. Haaretz stated bluntly that it was doubtful that Israel could stand the strains imposed by the present policy of unrestricted immigration, reports the New York Times.

The country's present difficulties have swept away whatever illusions remained about the economic effect of bringing between 15,000 and 20,000 persons into the country each month, said the paper, adding: "Unrestricted immigration is inconsistent with the establishment of a firm basis to our economy. Immigration must be planned. If the economy breaks down there will be no immigration at all."

Only 7,500 immigrants arrived in August and about the same number will enter this month. This reduction had led to a belief in many quarters that the Government had quietly changed its policy. But a spokesman for the Jewish Agency, which is responsible for the transportation and colonization of new immigrants, denied this. According to an official explanation the reduction was caused mainly by the necessity of overhauling the planes used in the operation that brought nearly 100,000 Jews out of Iraq this summer.

A contributory factor was the action of the Rumanian Government in giving notice of only a day or two of permission to leave to the immigrants from that country, forcing many to postpone their departure. By November, according to Jewish Agency officials, the rate of immigration will have been restored to 15,000 monthly, mainly from Iran and North Africa and including 4,000 from Rumania.

Haaretz spoke only of the economic effect of the flood of immigrants. With food scare, consumer goods becoming more difficult to find each month and inflation digging into everyone's pocketbook, this is the aspect of the problem

U.S. Hadassah Budget Is $8,235,000

Hadassah adopted budgets totaling $8,235,000—the highest in its history—to maintain its comprehensive network of social welfare, medical and youth services projects in Israel.

The thirty-seventh annual convention of the organization, at Atlantic City, N. J., with 3,600 delegates, representing a membership of 300,000, unanimously drafted Mrs. Samuel W. Halprin of New York to remain in office as president. Mrs. Halprin, who received a long ovation when she accepted, had completed the last of four one-year terms permitted by Hadassah's constitution.

Mrs. Raphael Tourover, of Washington, chairman of the nominating committee, said Mrs. Halprin was drafted because Mrs. [illegible], the committee's unanimous choice for president, was prevented from assuming office at this time because of a death in her family. The convention voted to draft Mrs. Halprin until Hadassah's midwinter conference when the national board will elect a new president.

Mrs. Halprin told the convention that the record-breaking budgets were "a clear indication that our organization would not let down Israel at a time when the need has never been greater, and the challenge more exciting."

"Israel's economy," she added, "has been strained by the constant flow of immigrants who must be absorbed and integrated into the

Woman Was Chief Founder of Barnard College

Mrs. Annie Nathan Meyer, chief founder and trustee of Barnard College, died in New York of coronary thrombosis in her residence at the Hotel Croydon, 12 East Eighty-sixth Street. Her age was 84. She was the wife of Dr. Alfred Meyer who, at his death on July 14 last year, was the oldest surviving alumnus of Columbia University. For many years they resided at 1225 Park Avenue. Mrs. Meyer's latest book, an autobiography, "It's Been Fun," was published on September 26.

In the Godey's Lady's Book era, when Annie Florance Nathan was a sheltered girl in a brownstone house on Fifth Avenue, her heart was set on one thing—to take the examinations at Columbia College. For two years she studied at home, because only men were allowed in the college on Forty-ninth Street. Her father was disturbed.

"Florance," he said, "you will never be married. Men hate intelligent wives."

But Miss Nathan took the examinations when she was 20 years old and within a year she had been married to a young doctor who had fascinated her with his playing of Chopin's prelude in C minor. Her whole life was a refutation of her father's mid-Victorian theories. Not only did she live to hear her husband again play Chopin at their golden wedding anniversary, but she founded Barnard College, fought vigorously against woman's suffrage, wrote many plays about women in business.

Mrs. Meyer was born on February 19, 1867, the daughter of Robert Weeks and Annie Florance Nathan, whose ancestors had sett-

View Promise Of Germans To Pay As Only First Step

Commenting on the vote of the West German Government to begin negotiations with Israel and Jewish groups to make restitution for wrongs done to Jews in Germany, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, co-chairman of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, said in New York:

"Only when the concrete proposals of the West German Government are made known, both as to the extent of its planned restitution and indemnification, and the procedure which it is prepared to follow, can Jewish public opinion judge the significance of the Chancellor's statement.

"Certainly no arrangement could be considered acceptable unless it satisfies not only the claims of individual Jews and of the Jewish people as such, but above all the specific and detailed claims presented by the Government of Israel which have already won the moral support of the western powers and of Jewish organizations throughout the world.

"Chancellor Adenauer has opened the way to the only restitution, considering the nature of the crime, which it is still in human power to make. As such, the statement must be noted with satisfaction. It is an initial move which must be followed by concrete proposals yet to be made by the Bonn authorities."

The Jewish Agency for Palestine, through the Joint Restitution Successor Organization, has been dealing with problems of German restitution for Jewish property.

The American Jewish Committee said it looks upon Chancellor Adenauer's statement as a first step toward Germany's assumption of its moral and legal responsibilities of the unprecedented crimes committed [illegible] and, indeed, its violation of the fundamental tenets of humane decency and democratic order."

The statement said the step "comes at a time that is crucial for both Western democracy and Germany's own internal regime," since the West otherwise could not "safely admit to its ranks a Germany whose adherence to democratic values and practices is open to doubt."

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's statement before the Bundestag in Bonn, Germany, included the following:

Israel To Buy Cattle In Ethiopia, Gets Non-Kosher Meat In Crisis

An Israeli Ministry of Agriculture survey made recently shows the food shortage is being felt almost entirely by the urban population. The Army and children in institutions who get special rations are still comparatively well off. New immigrants appear to be improving in health because, regardless how little they get in Israel, most had less before.

The worst hit are workers and among them the survey indicated a remarkable difference between men and women. Men are getting along reasonably well, but apparently women have tended to deprive themselves to give more to their children and husbands.

Pinhas Lavon, Minister of Agriculture, said there was still no prospect that fresh meat, which has not been distributed for six weeks, would become available this month. Therefore, he has decided to put on the market 1,500,000 tins of nonkosher Mexican meat despite an agreement between the Government and the rabbinate that official funds would not be used for the import of nonkosher foods, reports the New York Times.

Spurred by the current food crisis, Israel has signed a contract with a private Ethiopian group for the purchase within the next year of 10,000 tons of meat equal to six month's rations for the entire Israeli population. Shipments from Eritrea through the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aqaba to the Israeli port of Elath are expected to begin in a "few months", Pinhas Lavon, Minister of Agriculture, said.

If all goes well, this contract should solve the problem of Israeli's meat supplies, which are virtually nonexistent at the moment. Besides going far toward easing the perpetually critical food situation, the Ethiopian trade will push a project long dear to Israeli leaders — development of Elath from a tiny pioneering outpost of 1,000 persons to a booming outlet for Israeli goods going to Africa in exchange for food supplies.

A team of three Israeli veterinarians has been working in Eritrea and Ethiopia for several weeks. They are setting up arrangements for treating and quarantining diseased cattle. Meat exports from these African countries had been impossible before because of the disease situation. The maladies in-

Sheldon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Finkelstein, Deacon Road, was called to the Reading of the Law at Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, in celebration of his bar-mitzvah. He is the grandson of Sam. Lazare, Deacon Road, and the late Mrs. S. Lazare; and of Mr. and Mrs. B. Finkelstein, Lacombe Avenue. Receiving at a kiddush, Mrs. Louis Finkelstein wore a brown velvet tailored suit, with a coral-shaded velvet hat. Mrs. B. Finkelstein, the grandmother, wore a plum-colored crepe dress, with a V-shaped neckline, long sleeves, and draped skirt; also a black velvet hat. The head table held two arrangements of pom-poms and red roses; and the bar-mitzvah cake. The receiving line was marked by a trellis of gladioli and roses. Fifteen friends of Sheldon were present at a private screening and dinner party.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wiseberg, Maplewood Avenue, entertained at a tea at home in honour of their niece, Miss Goldie Wiseberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wiseberg, Birnam Avenue, who is the fiancee of Ralph Welikovitch, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Welikovitch, Hutchison Street. The hostess wore a navy-blue crepe suit, having a shawl collar, long sleeves, slim skirt, pleated in the front, the suit being trimmed with grey. Mrs. Harry Wiseberg wore an Oxford grey gabardine suit, with navy-blue felt hat and navy-blue blouse; Mrs. Welikovitch, a gold-coloured satin dress, having a V-neckline, three-quarter sleeves, slim skirt, and matching bolero; with a fawn straw hat; Mrs. T. Schwartz, grandmother of the groom-elect, Hutchison Street, a grey crepe dress, with brocade around the high neckline, long sleeves, slim skirt, and grey straw hat trimmed with blue. Miss Wiseberg wore a navy-blue crepe dress, made with white pique on the Peter Pan collar and cuffs, and having a full skirt; and a navy-blue crepe hat, trimmed with pink. The wedding will take place on November 4.

Mrs. Felix Finestone, St. Catherine Road, gave a tea at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, with about twenty guests present, in honour of Miss Goldie Wiseberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wiseberg, Birnam Avenue, whose marriage to Ralph Welikovitch, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Welikovitch, Hutchison Street, takes place on November 4, at Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue. Mrs. Finestone wore a black crepe dress, having V-neckline and long sleeves, and skirt draped to the side, a black felt hat, and corsage of red roses. Mrs. Welikovitch, mother of the groom-elect, was in a green crepe dress, which had a V-neckline, three-quarter sleeves, and slim skirt. Her hat was of grey felt. Mrs. Wiseberg, mother of the bride-elect, was in a rust-coloured lace dress, with a Peter Pan collar, three-quarter sleeves, flared skirt, with a matching redingote; also a rust-coloured felt hat, trimmed with a copper-shaded flower, and an orchid corsage. Miss Wiseberg wore a fawn gabardine suit, with a cocoa-brown hat and blouse, and had a corsage of pink roses. The table flowers were carnations, lillies-of-the-valley, and roses. Worked Up Paper Route To Vast Concern

Meyer A. Rosen, one of the five founders of the Metropolitan News Company, died in New York at Memorial Hospital after a brief illness, at the age of seventy-nine.

Born in Russia, Mr. Rosen came to the U. S. sixty years ago and soon after established a newspaper delivery route of Yiddish newspapers on the Lower East Side. Together with four other youths who had similar routes, he combined delivery systems in December, 1900, under the then-pretentious title of the Metropolitan News Company, an organization that now does an annual gross business of $9,000,000.

During the early days of the company deliveries were made from four pushcarts and a horse-drawn wagon. Mr. Rosen saw his modest beginnings expand to a fleet of 105 trucks, delivering 500,000 newspapers to 4,600 newsstands in the city. The Metropolitan delivery list now includes twenty English, four Yiddish and seventeen foreign-language publications, and operates from three buildings, says the New York Times.

His partners were Louis Weinstock, Joe Kalmanoff, Charles Hertzig, and the late Morris Eisenman. At present, two sons of the founders, Harold J. Weinstock and Abraham N. Rosen, are associated with the business. Mr. Rosen was active in business until his death.

Mr. Rosen was a founder and director of the Beth Moses Hospital in Brooklyn and the Brooklyn Jewish Center on Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn. He was a director of the Jewish Consumptive Relief Society of Denver, a member of Bnai Brith Albert Einstein Lodge of Brooklyn, Fort Greene Masonic Lodge, the Hebrew Hay Fever Association, Brooklyn Home of the Aged, Pride of Judea Orphans' Home, and the Home for Incurables in Brooklyn.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Gitta Rosen; three daughters, Mrs. Daisy Abrahams, Mrs. Estelle Kraner, and Mrs. Lillian Krebs; a sister, Mrs. Luba Sokolow; two brothers, Samuel and Jacob Rosen; seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

VIEW PROMISE

"The Federal Government will see to it that the restitution legislation is rapidly completed and that it is justly implemented. Further restitutions will follow.

"With regard to the extent of the reparations—a huge problem in view of the immense destruction of Jewish valuables by National Socialism—the limits must be considered which are set to the German ability to pay by the bitter necessity of having to provide for the innumerable war victims and to care for the refugees and expellees.

"The Federal Government is prepared, jointly with representatives of Jewry and the State of Israel, which has admitted so many homeless Jewish refugees, to bring about a solution of the material reparation problem in order to facilitate the way to a spiritual purging of unheard-of suffering.

"It is fully convinced that the spirit of true humanity must once more become alive and bear fruit. The Federal Government considers it the foremost duty of the German people to foster this spirit with all their power."

UNVEILINGS

Cahan Left Most Of Estate To Welfare

Abraham Cahan, of New York, retired editor of the Jewish Daily Forward, who died on August 31 at the age of 91, left nearly half of his $75,000 estate for distribution among educational, cultural, or charitable organizations in the United States, Europe or Palestine. This was learned when his executors, Harry Rogoff of 259 Riverside Drive; Alexander Kahn, 46 Willow Street, Brooklyn; and Ephim Jeshurin, 220 East 197th Street, filed his will for probate in Surrogate's Court. The will bequeathed to the executors the residuary estate to distribute in their discretion.

Mr. Cahan was an outstanding figure on the New York East Side for nearly six decades as a teacher, organizer, and journalist. He left legacies of $15,000 to his nephew and niece, Emanuel and Sylvia Cahan, both of 340 West Fifty-seventh Street; and $11,000 to his cousin, Eva Korf, of Tampa, Florida.

Canada has neither enough dentists nor enough dental schools, nor have Canadians the right attitude toward dental care and dental education, according to Dr. G. Edward Hall, president of the University of Western Ontario, and author of an article entitled, "Public Health Is People" in the current issue of Health, magazine of the Health League of Canada. In 1938 there were slightly more than 4,000 dentists in practice in Canada, a ratio of one per 2,700 of population. Today, with a population which has increased from some 11 millions to more than 14 millions, and at a time when the responsibilities of dentists to their patients are growing, Canada still has only five dental schools.

Ghetto Boy, Once Saved In Bag, Gets Fine Welcome In N.Y. School

Terry Finkeltal got what he wanted for his eighth birthday — to go to school. A special assembly was held in his honor to welcome him to Public School 122, First Avenue and Ninth Street. If that seems as odd as his wish, speeches explained how Terry's own background was not usual, either.

"We welcome a boy who was smuggled out of Poland in a potato sack," Beverly Shapiro, a member of the sixth grade, said. "He has suffered in the old country and I know we will all make it pleasant for him here in the United States."

Terry's 27-year-old mother sat on the platform throughout the program. She gave birth to the boy in an air-raid shelter in the ghetto of Przemysl. Eight hours later the baby was wrapped in a sack and smuggled to a nearby village, where he lived with a Christian family. When his mother was freed from the slave labor camp at Czestochowa she returned to claim him.

The Nazis shot the father seven months after the boy was born, says the New York Times. While the child and his mother were at a displaced persons camp in 1949 near Regensburg, Germany, she married Abraham Finkeltal, a 35-year-old farmer. The three came to the United States last month. The family walked to the school from the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society (H.I.A.S.) shelter, 425 Lafayette Street, where they live.

"We are glad to welcome you to our school and to our class," Robert Conahan, a third-grade student, said to Terry. "We hope you will like us."

There were other speeches by Max Weitzen, principal of the school, and Dr. I. Victor Burger, Assistant Superintendent of Schools. And finally Isaac L. Asofsky, executive director of H.I.A.S., gave Terry a leather brief case filled with school supplies.

After the entire assembly sang "Happy Birthday" for him, Terry, using half of his English vocabulary, responded: "I thank you."

His other English words are "okay, please, good-bye." He speaks Polish, German and Yiddish, which he also writes. He had never been inside school. Besides learning English, he wants to dress like his American friends.

Terry has brown hair and hazel eyes. He wore the brown suit with short pants that the Society gave him. "But tomorrow I will wear the long trousers my aunt gave me," he announced in a hallway interview. Determined to become an aviator, Terry declared without hesitation that what he liked best in New York was "everything."

JEWS OF LIBYA WANT OUT BEFORE FIRST OF YEAR

Representatives of 8,000 Jews in Libya have appealed to the American Joint Distribution Committee for help in emigrating to Israel before Libya becomes independent on January 1, 1952, the Committee conference heard in Paris, France.

Mme Helen Cazes Benatar, French attorney and delegate for North Africa, asserted that Libyan Jews would not feel safe once Arab tribal chiefs took control of the government. This, she said, was the most urgent of threats to the security of the half million Jews living in North Africa that have developed hand in hand with Arab nationalism.

Abe Loskove, of Memphis, Tenn., Committee director in Tripoli, reported that every Jewish community in Lybya had been evacuated to the relative safety of the capital city of Tripoli.

HOME FOR AGED IN N. Y. MOVES TO PARK

The Hebrew Home for the Aged, which moved in April from its thirty-five-year-old site in four old brownstone buildings on E. 105th Street, in Harlem, to a nineteen-acre plot on the banks of the Hudson in Riverdale, was dedicated in New York.

More than $600,000 was spent in reconstructing, furnishing and landscaping the Bronx property, acquired from the Riverdale Children's Association two years ago. The four-floor main building will house 150 persons and nine other buildings in the private park at 259th Street and Palisades Avenue, and will accommodate 175 others.

Oscar R. Ewing, Federal Security Administrator and a Riverdale resident, spoke at dedication exercises on the lawn in front of the main building, as 800 civic and religious leaders looked on.

"This new home," Mr. Ewing said, "is a symbol of the quiet revolution that is going on in the make-up of our nation. Our population is changing swiftly and inexorably. People live longer today than ever in our history, because the great advances in science and the progress in human well-being have made longer lives possible for us."

Doctor Was Scholar Of Talmud

Dr. Raphael A. Bendove of 19 Maple Avenue, Cedarhurst, L. I., a diagnostician who specialized in chest and heart ailments and internal medicine, died at his home of a coronary thrombosis. His age was 54.

A master of Hebrew letters and a Talmudic scholar, Dr. Bendove was president of the Hebrew Medical Society of New York in 1933-35. He contributed many articles to the scientific program on medical subjects dealing with internal medicine to the society's publication, The Hebrew Physician.

He also wrote for the Archives of Internal Medicine, Journal of the American Medical Association, American Review of Tuberculosis, American Journal of Medical Science and Archives of Surgery.

Born in Russia, Dr. Bendove received his medical degree from the American Medical University in Beirut, Syria, in 1915. He continued his studies at Columbia University, Albany Medical College and Johns Hopkins University. Since 1936, he had been Professor of Clinical Medicine at Long Island College of Medicine.

Recently Dr. Bendove closed his office at 65 Central Park West, where he maintained a practice as a diagnostician, because he planned to settle in Israel with his family. He had arranged to sail on October 11 to teach and practice there. He had given a series of heart and chest lectures in Israel in 1949.

Surviving are his widow, the former Lillian Weiss, of New York; a daughter, Rena, and a son, Egal, now serving with the armed forces in Korea.

At a monthly Jewish Forum opened by the World Jewish Congress British Section, in London, the subject was "Can Jewry rely on the United Nations?" A. L. Easterman, political secretary, was in the chair. George Ivan Smith, director of the United Nations Information Centre in London, said the United Nations had made an unprecedented beginning in the sphere of the protection and promotion of human rights, making them a matter of international responsibility and creating the first signs of a developing international morality. The success should not be measured in terms of one or two years and it was necessary to recognise that powerful interests made the implementation of humanitarian principles difficult.

■ CANADIAN Jewish Congress: Samuel Bronfman, national president, announced that the next convention will take place in Montreal, on October 27-29, the ninth such assembly since the Congress was reorganized in 1934 in Toronto. Originally the Congress had been established in 1919 to deal with the problems arising out of the First World War. It was reorganized in the early 30's when Hitlerism raised problems, involving defense against Fascist propaganda, assistance to victims of persecution, the establishment of the Jewish community in Israel, etc. During the war the Congress led the considerable war effort of the Jewish community, maintained sixteen servicemen centres across the country, furnished hundreds of recreation quarters for the men in the services, carried out a recruiting campaign, and maintained war records. Since the war, the Congress has been active in the overseas relief program on behalf of displaced persons and has led the resettlement in Canada of many of the 20,000 Jewish immigrants who have come to this country. The Congress is one of the prime movers behind the National Conference for Israel and Jewish Rehabilitation which is the Canadian sponsor of the three year $1,600,000,000 plan to settle 600,000 additional threatened Jews in the State of Israel.

Saul Hayes, of Montreal, executive director of the Canadian Jewish Congress, is conferring with Moses W. Beckelman (left), director general of the American Joint Distribution Committee overseas operations; and Moses A. Leavitt, AJDC's executive vice chairman, at the Hotel Palais d'Orsay in Paris, France, while visiting in Europe. AJDC directors were present from eighteen countries. At the conference, the liberal immigration attitude of Canada was praised by AJDC's chief of resettlement services. The Canadian Jewish Congress and the United Jewish Relief Agencies of Canada cooperate with the AJDC in its welfare program.

ISRAELI PAPER

considered by most. But there is another consideration that is talked about less but looms in everyone's thinking, says the New York Times.

What they think about but hardly even mention is the quality of present immigration, not alone the quantity. They are afraid that a continued influx of the oriental Jews who now make up 53 per cent of Israel's population will depress the country's standards to a point where it becomes just another Levantine state. The argument is that time and resources must be gained to assimilate and educate the newcomers before the earlier settlers of the country are swamped.

The present leaders of Israel and particularly Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion, who believes the country's security can be assured only by steadily increasing population, do not subscribe to these views. They are determined to raise the population to 2,000,000 by the end of 1953. They are confident that with economic aid from the United States the country will remain a vigorous trailblazer in the Near East.

The National Conference of Christians and Jews announced that Benson Ford, vice-president and general manager of the Lincoln-Mercury division of the Ford Motor Company, was be installed as Protestant national co-chairman of the Conference at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on October 4. Mr. Ford, son of the late Edsel Ford and a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, was elected to the Conference post last June, succeeding Charles E. Wilson who became director of the Office of Defense Mobilization.

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

(Radio address by Rabbi Dr. Harry J. Stern on behalf of Red Feather Federation of Montreal, at St. James United Church, where Rev. Father Michael O'Brien (Catholic); Rev. Charles Este (Negro Community); Rev. T. McLennan (Protestant); and H. G. Norman, general chairman of the campaign, took part.)

It is a privilege again for me this year, as on past occasions, to participate in a church broadcast on behalf of the Red Feather Campaign. The wisest of men, King Solomon, so Scripture relates, wished above all else in life "an understanding heart." That wish pleased God. Opposed to the understanding heart of Solomon, is the hardening heart of Pharaoh. The understanding heart is characterized by the virtue of sympathetic imagination. By that we mean the ability to put ourselves in places of others and to share their experience with discerning sympathy.

Concerning one's identification with the perplexities of others, Scripture records the assertion of Ezekiel: "I sat where they sat." He, the Prophet, chose for seven days to sit in Babylon by the River Chabar with the distressed Jewish exiles in order to be of comfort to them. Great religion has ever had as one of its major functions the cultivation of the understanding heart. Social reform and genuine works of charity are made possible by those who are thus blessed.

Hence, an Albert Schweitzer, citizen of France, Christian theologian, philosopher and musician, motivated by great religion, takes up the study of medicine, all the better to minister to the natives of Equatorial Africa. Indeed, he is the brother of all who suffer. Hence, that noble Jewess, Henrietta Szold, citizen of the United States, at the age of eighty, moved by the misery of persecuted Jewish childhood in Europe, rededicated her life anew in the work of rescuing thousands of mere boys and girls from the hell of totalitarized Europe and bringing them to a new life of freedom and security in the State of Israel.

Citizens of Montreal, who are truly religious, be they Jews or Christians, will gladly seek to identify themselves with the needs of the distressed, the poor and the sick and with the needs of under-privileged youth, and do all to alleviate human sufferings. They will know that suffering recognizes no sectionalism. Our citizens for the most part do possess the understanding heart. For on occasions past, during campaigns of charity under various auspices, they have responded generously and we are confident that this year's Red Feather Campaign of Welfare Federation of Montreal, will be equally triumphant.

May God, the Father of us all, bless you who help the poor, care for the sick and the needy and extend a helping hand to those who have lost their way in the world.

WOMAN

led in New York before the Revolution. The early death of her mother kept her pretty well confined to her home and she studied under private tutors. All the time she was annoyed because New York had no college of scholastic standing for women.

Realizing that the handicap would continue if some women did not start the ball rolling, she set out to found a college that would be part of a university system, fully affiliated with a men's college, giving the same diploma and demanding the same degree of scholarship, yet which would not be coeducational.

In the press and on the platform she advocated her cause. Backed by promises of financial aid, she finally won over the trustees of Columbia College. Her husband, then a youthful doctor beginning a long career primarily devoted to fighting tuberculosis, without knowing where he could raise the money if the others failed, guaranteed the rent for the first year.

Barnard College opened in 1887 practically on a shoestring—Mrs. Meyer had pledges, mostly from friends, of annual contributions of $3,800 for four years and $5,000 in cash. It graduated its first class of girls in 1893, and ever since its progress has been steady and sure. Mrs. Meyer never lost her interest in Barnard and upon more than one occasion the college honored the woman who became its oldest living original trustee.

During the long and hectic fight for woman's suffrage, Mrs. Meyer, who had revolted against the canons of her own age, vigorously fought the movement. Yet she always wrote under her own name. She considered herself a feminist. Supremely happy in her own marriage, she nevertheless was a firm believer in divorce.

Shortly after the turn of the century she induced Thomas Addis Emmett, who had spent a lifetime collecting Americana, including George Washington's will, to sell his collection for $150,000 to John S. Kennedy, president of the Lenox Library, who then presented it to the city.

In 1911, deploring what she called the spoiling of American women by adulation, she wrote a play entitled "The Dominant Sex," which attracted much attention in book form because it pilloried the use of "sex appeal" by business women.

Three of her plays received Broadway production. In 1920 "The District Attorney" had a brief run and was followed the next year by the more successful "The Advertising of Kate," a comedy about a business woman, which caused the late Alexander Woollcott to say in The New York Times that it was "written on the assumption that women of affairs never have any." The last was "Black Souls," a race problem play, produced in 1932 by the Provincetown Players.

Besides plays Mrs. Meyer wrote many books, including "Helen Brent, M. D." (1893) and "Robert Annys" (1901), a novel which was better received by English than by American critics. She also wrote "My Park Book," a sketch of Central Park; "Barnard Beginnings," which tells the factual story of the birth of that college and a play, popular with amateurs, called "P's and Q's."

Mrs. Meyer was an active lecturer and publicist. In the latter capacity she wrote hundreds of letters to the newspapers. In 1924 she established the Margaret Meyer graduate scholarship at Barnard in memory of her only daughter, Margaret Meyer Cohen.

Mrs. Meyer was a member of the Authors League of America, the Dramatists Guild, the Woman's Faculty Club of Columbia and the Barnard College Club.

A funeral service for Mrs. Annie Nathan Meyer, was held in Barnard Hall, at Barnard College, Broadway and 117th St. One hundred and fifty persons attended.

The service was conducted by Rabbi Isidor B. Hoffman, counselor to Jewish students at Columbia University, in the college parlor, where the board of trustees of Barnard usually meets, and where a painting of Mrs. Meyer by Ernest Ipsen is one of the portraits hung there. Rabbi Hoffman opened the service with a reading of the Ninetieth Psalm beginning, "Lord, Thou has been our dwelling place in all generations." He then recited the Twenty-third Psalm.

Speaking briefly on what the life of Mrs. Meyer had meant to Barnard, Dean Millicent C. McIntosh recalled that she had been a member of the first board of trustees of the college on its founding in 1889. "Although I have not figures to back me up," Dean McIntosh said, "I don't believe she ever missed a trustees' meeting from the beginning until last year. Her doctor forbade her to come to the two last meetings in 1950-'51. If he had not forcibly detained her she would have come to the meeting last spring, anyway."

clude tuberculosis and hoof and mouth disease. The plan is to bring cattle alive to Elath, keep them there under additional quarantine and fatten them for slaughter. The fresh killed meat will then be transported to population centers in refrigerator trucks.

Mr. Lavon said that, although the food situation was "difficult", it was not so bad as it appeared. The main shortages, he said, are in bulk foods such as potatoes and vegetables. The individual diet of rationed and available nonrationed foods did not fall below 2,600 calories daily in August, he said, and would not do so in September.

Of this, however, 1,000 calories is presented by bread and flour. Ample bread is assured to the end of this year, he said. He said he expected improvement in supplies of sugar and vegetables in the next two months when new shipments arrived and new crops were gathered.

According to Mr. Lavon, the bottleneck in the Israel food situation is a shortage of steel pipe which makes it impossible to increase the area of irrigated land at the rate that had been planned. This is not a matter of foreign currency but simply inability to place orders and obtain deliveries because of the world steel shortage.

Mr. Lavon discounted arguments made by opponents of the Government in Israel. The charges are that inadequate local agricultural production resulted from prices too low to afford incentives to growers and to inefficiency of new immigrants settled on the land. He said he thought the Israel farmers had just about reached maximum production with the amount of irrigated and available land, according to the New York Times.

Mr. Lavon said that refusal of kibbutzim (collective settlements) to abandon their ideological ban on hired labor had, however, hampered possible increases in output. Government experts had developed a plan of combining Jewish and Arab agricultural techniques on non-irrigated land that they believe would double production. But this would require large numbers of day laborers. The Government hoped to put 100,000 dunams (a dunam is about six-tenths of an acre) under the new system, but succeeded only in getting holders of 30,000 dunams to agree to the plan.

country's economic framework. Hadassah's aid is in consonance with the United States' policy of helping free people everywhere."

In an analysis of Hadassah's budgets, Miss Julliet N. Benjamin of New York, fund-raising coordinator, said the money would be used as follows to continue Hadassah's program:

Medical work in Israel—$3,000,000.

Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center and Medical School building fund in Jerusalem—$1,500,000.

Maintenance and education of refugee children under the auspices of the Youth Aliyah (immigration) movement—$2,300,000.

Youth services, including vocational education—$600,000.

For purchase and afforestation of land in Israel through the Jewish national fund—$700,000.

For Zionist youth work in the United States—$135,000.

Resolutions included praising the United States delegation for its stand in the United Nations calling for the opening of the Suez Canal to all shipping carrying cargo for Israel and urging prompt ratification by Congress of the convention outlawing genocide adopted by the United Nations Assembly in 1948.

The delegates called on the United States Government to exercise its influence to bring about direct negotiations between Israel and the Arab States under the auspices of the Palestine Conciliation Commission. The delegates expressed their gratitude to Senators Paul Douglas of Illinois and Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Representatives John McCormack and Joseph Martin of Massachusetts, and their colleagues for the aid given to Israel under the Mutual Security Act.

One thousand new classrooms for schools and kindergartens are being built in Tel Aviv to accommodate 14,000 new children who have registered so far for the new school year. These classrooms will be ready by the end of November. The new registration includes 6,000 five-year-olds for kindergarten. Where no municipal kindergartens are available, the children will be distributed among private institutions.
